Jessica Stewart

Nancy Farino is a writer and actor from the West Midlands. She trained at The Bristol Old Vic Theatre School and has since worked as an actor with Netflix, Apple, BBC and Sky. Her debut play, Fatherland, recently finished its run at Hampstead Theatre, directed by Tessa Walker, to strong critical acclaim, and is published by Samuel French. She began co-writing and producing plays in 2017. Her theatre work includes Twenty Something (Old Red Lion/Edinburgh Fringe Festival) and Blessings (Camden People's Theatre). Alongside this, she has been developing her latest play, My Strong Intent, as part of Hampstead Theatre's INSPIRE-Programme.
