The Lynch Brothers (David T. Lynch & Keith Lynch) are a writer-director duo from the UK who were selected as Screen International Stars of Tomorrow and were listed on the Tracking Board's Young and Hungry List amongst the top 100 new writers in Hollywood. Their International Space Station-set thriller event series, Orbital, has been bought by Netflix. It will be created by The Lynch Brothers, Seth Fisher (The Night Agent) and Steve Blackman (Umbrella Academy). Blackman and Fisher will act as showrunners whilst the brothers will write and executive produce as well as direct on the series. In 2016 they wrote the action thriller feature film, Final Score, directed by Scott Mann, starring Dave Bautista and Pierce Brosnan. Final Score was released theatrically worldwide in 2018. Their short films have been selected at reputable festivals around the world including Tribeca, BFI London Film Festival and Edinburgh International Film Festival. Their most recent sci-fi short, Zero starring Bella Ramsey (The Last of Us), was produced as a Dust Original and following a successful festival run was released online racking up over a million views across all platforms.
