Riz Moritz

Writer / Director

Represented by:
Jessica Jones

Riz Moritz is a working-class, British-Indian Writer & Director from North West London. Raised between the White working-class spaces of football diehards and the no-filter personalities on her Indian side, Riz developed her dry sense of humour and an eye for nuanced characters early on. She left school at 16 and immediately began working at the House of Commons, where she got an early crash course in class and power - something that remains central to her thinking to this day.- Riz wrote for ITV's Coronation Street after being selected from over 600 applicants for the Original Voices Scheme. Riz wrote A Loud Piece of Armour which-premiered at Palm Springs ShortFest 2025 with Oscar-nominated DOP Robbie Ryan and award-winning actress Jo Hartley. Riz's work explores themes of identity, womanhood, and the uncomfortable comedy of survival.
